Every part of our body has its own function. Let's talk about our senses of perception.

There are five senses of perception; sight, hearing, touch, smell and taste. They help us learn and classify things in surroundings. For example, when we want to taste some food, the taste buds help us know how the food is, delicious or not. We know each kind of flavor because of taste buds on our tongues.

The taste buds indicate that the food is sweet, bitter, sour or salty. The sense of smell also helps us taste food, too. When we catch a cold and we cannot smell anything, we feel that the food is not delicious. The food will be tasteless when we cannot smell. This means, both taste and smell helps us tell the taste of food.

5. What does the word "They" refer to? (6)

a. Senses of perception
